

Hands Healing the Land

Boodja-Moort-Kaartdijin

Community Science Conference

Join land care practitioners, scientists and volunteers come together to share how they make a difference in caring for our unique flora and fauna, learn from traditional owners and build community.

Speakers from all walks of ecological restoration, natural resource management and environmental education will share their experiences and give you a chance to learn, connect and build community.

When: Friday 19th March 2021

Where: Keiran McNamara Conservation Science Centre, Department Biodiversity Conservation and Attractions, Kensington

Time: 8.30am Registration - 4pm

Conference themes:

- Citizen Science: science and community working together and community working together
- Learning from the land: a traditional owners perspective and knowledge sharing
- Plants and animals; learning from each other to protect our unique flora and fauna
- Building Community: working together to learn and connect.

Conference highlights:

Featuring keynote speakers from CSIRO two way science program, Birdlife Australia, Murdoch University plus local community land care groups, traditional owners and local government.

Conference program and tickets:

Tickets and program information through Humanitix.com.au
events.humanitix.com.au/hands-healing-the-land

- Full fee $15
- Concession $10
- Group (max 4 people) $20

*Ticket prices include all catering

Proudly supported by

